Building Peace and Caring for the Environment through Board Games

The Summary of Peace Generation Indonesia's Programs

Building peace and protecting the environment is not just about theory; it's also about sharing actual experiences and practices.

Thirty junior high school students will be challenged to become heroes of peace and the environment by creating a campaign project in the Heroes of Peace and Ecology (HOPE) program. This program is a collaboration between PeaceGen and Eco Camp.

These students will learn to create projects that promote peace and the environment accompanied by skilled trainers. In addition, these trainers hone their empathy skills by reviewing the 12 Basic Values of Peace accompanied by Mr. Sony, one of the Agents of Peace Educator.

Additionally, the students will also understand the seven values of awareness in protecting the environment, which Regi conveyed as the program coordinator of the Eco Camp.

Both materials are delivered interactively through games, as is typical of PeaceGen. And this method will be used later with the junior high school students when participating in the training. They will learn about peace and the environment through games, one of which is the board game: Bencana.

Through the board game Bencana, the trainers get tips on building peace and caring for the environment. How we need to take care of the environment starts with ourselves, appreciating the earth, and taking initiative so that peace exists worldwide. It's as simple as realizing that the planet is not doing well and actively taking steps to protect the environment.

In addition to the HOPE program, PeaceGen holds various other programs, such as mentoring new students at the Indonesia University of Education and the Bandung Institute of Technology through the Frosh program. There is also a webinar on building empathy for violence prevention in the SEAN-CSO program.

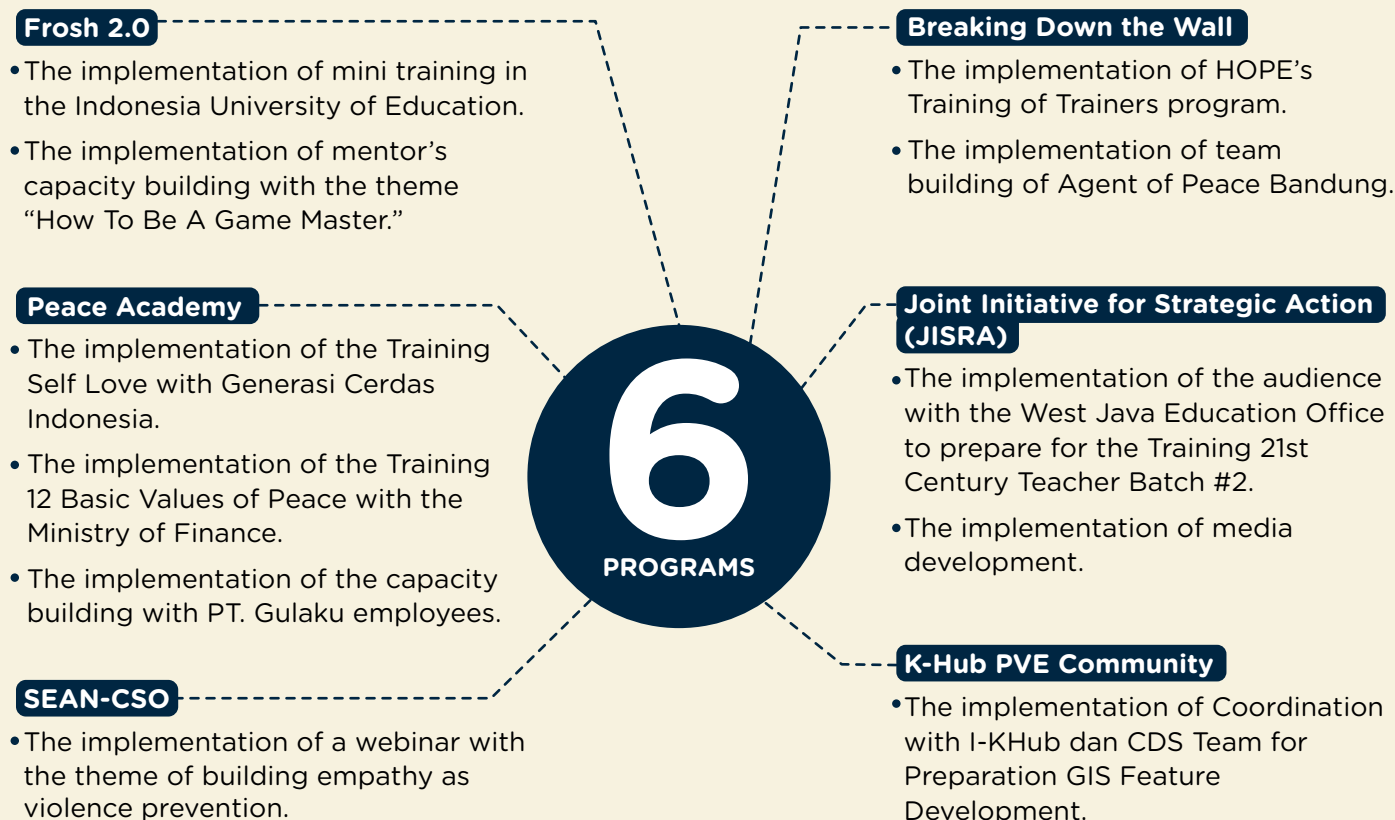

PeaceGen, through Peace Academy, organizes various trainings about the peace values. For example, self-love training, training on 12 Basic Values of Peace, and capacity building with Gulaku employees.

Agent of Peace Team Building: The Answer To Overcoming Prejudice

"You can't understand or empathize with someone if you haven't tried walking a mile in their shoes. So before judging, we must first experience what they went through."

Erick Lincoln, Co-Founder of Peace Generation, conveyed this idea in team building activities with Agent of Peace (AoP) Bandung. This activity was attended by various AoP, including educators, students, and employees.

In this activity, with the theme of breaking down prejudice against others, AoPs who have learned the 12 Basic Values of Peace increase their capacity to hone empathy. Erick started to lead the session by saying that a person's identity is built on the group to which he belongs. Organizational groups and groups based on connections, such as hobbies.

To recognize the identity of each group, AoPs were instructed to form groups based on their status in the family. There are groups as the youngest child, the father, and the second child. It didn't stop here; the AoPs were then instructed to find their group based on their respective beliefs, consisting of fellow Christians and AoPs who were Muslim.

Each group gives a reason why they were in that group. Some thought because of their own choice, and some also followed their parents' beliefs. Research shows that someone joining a group based on specific criteria will feel better than people outside the group, which is natural.

One of the most critical things in a group is to look for the positive side. Learn to empathize with being able to understand and feel what other people think. If two different groups are combined, the feeling will be better and unified.

Learning to hone empathy is also carried out by high school students in Bandung through the Breaking Down The Walls program. Muhammadiyah Junior High School students met with Yahya Christian Junior High School to get to know and understand each other. This meeting is certainly not one time only, as it takes more than one meeting to hone empathy from each group.

Finally, these students work together to solve problems at school, such as the three great sins of education through collaboration. Shortly, they will share tips on how to fight bullying in schools through the 2022 AoP Summit.
